

Figure 6: A decorative glass tumbler with a faceted base and a lattice-patterned top.

The decorative glass tumbler shown in Figure 6 is a classic example of a highball glass, often used for serving cocktails and other beverages. The faceted base and lattice-patterned top are characteristic of the "cut glass" style, which is known for its intricate and reflective surfaces. The glass is made of clear, high-quality glass and is designed to be both functional and aesthetically pleasing. The lattice pattern on the top is particularly striking, as it creates a complex, three-dimensional effect that changes as the glass is viewed from different angles. The faceted base also adds to the overall decorative appeal, with its sharp edges and facets catching the light and creating a shimmering effect. This type of glass is often used in formal settings and is a popular choice for those who appreciate fine glassware.
