

California Proposition 65, also known as the Safe Drinking Water Act, is a law that requires businesses to provide information about the presence of certain chemicals in their products. The law is designed to protect consumers from harmful chemicals and to ensure that they are aware of the risks associated with certain products. The law is a key part of California's environmental protection efforts and is a model for other states.

California Proposition 65 is a law that requires businesses to provide information about the presence of certain chemicals in their products. The law is designed to protect consumers from harmful chemicals and to ensure that they are aware of the risks associated with certain products. The law is a key part of California's environmental protection efforts and is a model for other states.

